

Andy Shore's Singing Call Collection

Second Edition, rev 1

Collection Compilation ©1999, 2001,2010 by Andrew I. Shore

I've been collecting, researching, and plagiarizing singing call figures from various sources for about as long as I've been calling. This is a collection of nearly 500 figures for the Basic [sic], Mainstream, and Plus programs of Modern Western Square Dancing.

Some figures are marked “tuff” or “cute” and may require workshopping a bit or introducing some of the material in the preceding patter part of a tip. All the figures are Corner Lady progressions, unless otherwise noted. Not all of these figures have been “road-tested”. Some of them may not even work or time out correctly. Use them at your own risk. You may wish to push your checkers thru them, or work them with your favorite checker-moving program. If you find a problem sequence, please let me know.

The figures are sorted by CALLERLAB program (though I've kept Basic separate) and then lexicographically – which isn't much use to anyone but me, but it allows me to do my best to avoid duplicates, and to attempt to use uniform spelling, terminology, capitalization, and formatting. Besides, I can't think of any substantially better way to organize them. I've kept Basic separate from Mainstream, as I still use that distinction when teaching. Note that due to program changes since the first edition, some figures got moved from MS to Plus.

This document is available free of charge for downloading, viewing, printing, and use. However, I do claim a compilation copyright on this collection. See the next page for information about what that means. This document may be downloaded from my web site at <http://andyshore.com/>

Feedback and constructive criticism for improving the content and/or presentation of this material is welcome – email me at singingcalls@andyshore.com. If you enjoy using this collection, drop me an email. If you have favorite figures you'd like me to consider for inclusion in a future edition, please send them my way.

These pages are produced with a binding margin on the left hand side, assuming they are printed double-sided [Print on Both Sides/Flip on Long Edge/Front to Back]. I go to FedEx Office (or go print it there if you don't have a duplexing printer) and get it bound with their “Coil” binding with a clear plastic front & solid back cover. This is a very durable binding, and it allows you to turn to any page and lay the book flat. I insert colored separator pages between the 3 “levels” (Basic|MS|+), and put some blank pages in the back for notes.

I've put considerable time and effort into creating this collection, and I'm happy to share my work with others. While I make it available free of charge, I hope it has some value to you. If you find this document useful & think it is worth something, I hope you will consider making a donation to a square dance charity.

This collection is copyright ©1999, 2001, 2010 Andrew I. Shore.

How can I claim a copyright on material I didn't write? I'm not. What I'm claiming is a "compilation" copyright in the work I've done to collect, correct, edit, format, and publish this document.

I claim no copyright for any individual sequence in this collection. To my knowledge, most of them are in the public domain.

What does a compilation copyright mean? It means that you may use these singing call figures individually for your own purposes – especially to call at a live dance, or for use in a recorded performance. What you can't do is reproduce the entire collection or substantial portions thereof without my copyright attribution. You may not use this as a source for another collection without my explicit permission. You may not reproduce this document, or a substantial number of these figures in textual form (printed, electronic, online) for sale.

Here's some good information about copyright myths:
